

but on the solemn assurance of his wife that she was innocent he discontinued the suit. He is now convinced that she deceived him and is guilty of what was charged in the former complaint. In making a motion for alimony and costs before Judge Clement yesterday, the defendant alleged that the charges against her are based upon conspiracy between her husband and his brother to enable the former to divorce. She also charges that her husband is brutal and passionate and has threatened her with a whip and has threatened to kill her. In regard to the charge that she went with her husband to the Colony Line. On their way back to Brooklyn, her brother-in-law, who had come to take her in a house where she had some of his friends lived, and they sat for some time in a parlor. There was no improvement between them, so he would return the next day and show her a dispatch from a private detective who had watched her and saw her enter a disreputable house with her brother-in-law. She explained the matter to her husband. He confided it to another who the plan was an arranged one between him and his brother. The case was adjourned yesterday.

Mrs. Smith horsewhipped her brother-in-law in a street for defaming her character after she was received by her husband.
